OVERVIEW

Did you know that stormwater is the most overlooked part of a building that our client's utilise our services for? In fact, nearly all of our work is a result of failed management or service plans which have not been executed according to the original designer's specification.

What happens as a result of this in action?

- Flood Damage
- Water Damage
- Storm Damage

While most insurance policies cover these items, what isn't covered and isn't quantifiable until it's too late, is inconvenience and unexpected interruptions in occupancy of otherwise safe and functional buildings.

While our team are trained and experienced in plumbing, our goal is to keep water flowing, and add value too and with water. Plumbers aren't always skilled and equipped to tackle problems that are specific to stormwater. You may find that some plumbers even decline to work on critical projects because of this. Our team is trained specifically to minimise damage from uncontrolled water flow, and make safe ready for remedial work to commence.

WHAT WE DO

When it comes to repairs and remediation, our team has the knowledge and skills to get things back to order. Our specialisation is adding value too and with water, and we do so in the following ways:

CLIENT TESTIMONIALS

HazelGrove
Early Education Centre

As an operator of quality childcare centres, It's essential our sites keep operating, even during severe weather events. Paul and his team have been critical to business continuity when we've had car park floods. The safety of our staff, parents and children is critical, so when we needed help to get access to our carparks, Transform Water has been there to help us. We've also used Transform Water for regular maintenance of our sites which includes gutter cleaning, tank maintenance and pump repairs. The team are professional, prompt, experienced and reliable. For me, this is important because I can concentrate on other areas of the business. Managing one team to do it all across multiple sites simplifies our maintenance requests.
